PRIMARY COLOURS

The core of our palette is a mixture of black, green and grey with elements of white. When using black or green it should be paired to create a boldness and call to action. Having a diversified colour palette allows us to designate certain colours for certain functions.
Below you will see bright colours to act as prime attention-catchers to be used across calls to action, buttons, icons and to add accents of colours to larger important pieces of information. Similar tonal ranges are also included to designate to different services and allow for breaking apart different sections in a proposal or website. The neutral colours are used to give the eye a rest, allow for contrast and support accessibility needs as well as serve as good background colours.
